

WHAT DO YOU CALL YOUR DAD? OR AT OUR AGE, WHAT DO YOUR KIDS CALL YOU?, “DAD”, “FATHER”, “POP”?

Dad

Like the names for our female parents, papa and its many variations were primarily imitative of the first sounds that young children produce, which include the P, B, and D sounds. Throughout the Middle East and South Asia, fathers are called baba.

Baba, dada, and papa are examples of what child-language acquisition experts call “reduplicated canonical babbling,” something universally observed as children enter the babbling phase of language accession. Reduplication is when a word, a sound, an element of a word, or a phrase is repeated.

However, as we get older, we come up with more witty (and probably more annoying) names for this lovable guy ...

- 1. Wallet: He Who Has All The Money. If you want to go to the movies, you make a beeline for the ATM that’s in the living room reading the paper. You know, like The Beaver did with his dad.
- 2. BFG: This stands for Big Friendly Guy. A little obscure, but that’s the sheer genius of it. It’s an inside thing between you both. “BFG! Ready to go to the baseball game?”
- 3. Mufasa: Circle of Life and all that. He was the king of the jungle in The Lion King. ‘Nuff said, little Simba.
- 4. Sarge: Does your dad hold a military rank? Or, does he run the house like a boot camp? Hopefully, he won’t put you on k.p. if you use this one.
- 5. Care Bear: Big, cuddly, and colorful. Ah, c’mere, ya big lug.
- 6. Daddy-o: Retro, as in American Graffiti. (Kids, look it up on Netflix.) Call him this with a Dean Martin tone to your voice.
- 7. Homer: A tribute to the patriarch of The Simpsons. Mmmm, doughnuts.
- 8. Popsicle: It just sounds funny.

Fun fact: Father was spelled with a D in place of a TH until as recently as the late 1500s, though the term itself dates back to the time when Old English was spoken. Dad was first recorded in the 1500s, along with the more colloquial daddy. Pop arose in America in the 1830s.
